Rise of Master Chief, Fall of Azeroth

Disclaimer: I don't own Halo and I don't own Warcraft. Sux for me.

Chapter 1

All was peaceful and quiet. Well, at least as quiet as it ever got in Azeroth. With the recent addition of the blood elves to the horde and the Dranei to the alliance, the battle between the two factions had grown to all out war. Sitting atop his frostsaber, Fatican looked around the commons of Ironforge for his friend, Lightkeeper. Fatican knew Lightkeeper would want to keep away from him; most warriors didn't like loosing every duel to a druid. Suddenly, a huge explosion rocked the steaming earth beneath his feet. Fatican passed it off as another horde attempt to breach the great forge. Another explosion rocked the earth and he turned to the paladin next to him to find what that explosion was. "Hey, do you have any idea what's causing this ruckus?" said Fatican.

"No idea," said the paladin but it seems to be coming from the Depruun Tram."

"Thanks, I'll go see what's going on," replied Fatican, and he raced over to the tram, taking a shortcut through the Great Forge. But, once he got to the great forge, a giant green blob landed right in front of him. The blob turned out to be a capsule. Right in front of Fatican, the capsule began to open and smoke covered whatever was inside it.
